Thinking Out Loud

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

The United Nations, to win the initative in the war against the Axis, must soon open a second front, it is now agreed, and there are increasing indications that the occupation of Europe by Allied troops is one of the ultimate objectives of such a campaign.

The military aspects of that titanic undertaking must be left to military experts. When the second front will be opened; where our troops will first open the attack, and how the momentous conflict will be fought—these problems, of necessity, must be dealt with by military strategists and the responsible heads of the Allied nations. But there are economic and production problems ahead, which will come in the wake of that battle for victory, which American agriculture must play a large part in solving. And it is just as vital that America prepare now this phase of the fight to crush the Axis as for the battle itself.

When the United Nations have freed France, Norway, Belgium, Poland, Greece and the other nations now enslaved by Nazi Germany; and when Japan collapses, and China is free from blockade—when that time comes, America again will be called upon to assume the tremendous job o feeding most of the civilized world. There will be immediate and urgent need for food and other supplies in the liberated nations so that their man power can take part in the final devastating knock out blows against Hitler and Hirohito. There will be critical and immediate need, too, so that millions now facing starvation may be saved.

What part can American farm surpluses, accumulated during the long years of depression, play in meeting that problem? What can be done, for example, to utilize the huge wheat surpluses in the United States?

U. S. Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, who is close to the farm problems of the Middle-West and who has also had an opportunity to study the international situaton, urged weeks and months ago that the War Production Board not only allow materials for storage facilities to be allocated to the wheat belt, but also that the WPB should insist that the lumber and nails be allocated for storage construction. "The regulations were modified," he reports, "but, I am much afraid, too little and too late."

Senator Capper believes, however, that other steps still can be taken to insure the utilization of wheat which is now surplus, but which will be desperately needed when America must undertake the job of feeding most of continental Europe.

He comments as follows:

"It seems pitiful to think that millions of bushels of good wheat are going to rot on the ground in the states in the wheat belt this year, because of lack of storage space. During coming months, perhaps for a year, this wheat—1,540,000,000 to 1,500,000,000 buhsels in all—is going to be surplus, unmarketable for human consumption. And without adequate storage facilities, millions of bushels will absolutely go to waste, unless we can find other uses for this wheat.

"There are two ways in which this wheat can be used to advantage, instead of being allowed to go to waste. One is through feeding it to animals. Under present conditions, Britain cannot use wheat from the United States, even under gift through lend-lease, because of the Canadian situation. Canada has two or three years' supply of export wheat; in the United States, we have between two and three years' supply of wheat for domestic consumption. That is, if wheat is to be used only for milling into flour and by-products of flour milling.

"But if that wheat is turned into pork and chickens and eggs, then it becomes available to meet the rapidly increasing demands for meat and poultry products both at home and abroad. Any program that will divert tns of millions, or a hundred million or so, bushels of wheat into feeding channels, should be put into effect at the earliest possible moment."

The other possible outlet for surplus wheat, Senator Capper declares, is its development and use for industrial purposes.

"The base of many products used in industry," he continues, "is industrial alcohol. We have even learned, in the past few months, that the Russians have been making rubber from grain alcohol for nearly a quarter of a century. The easiest and most practical way to make alcohol is from grains. Also, of course, it can be made from sugar molasses, but that is out for the duration of the war. Sugar is rationed. Wheat is surplus. It is onl sensible, then, to make alcohol from wheat."

y This is only one aspect of a big problem; there are other surplus commodities beside wheat, many of them in California. But it is at least encouraging that some thought is being given now, before it s too late, to salvaging current surpluses for the day not for distant when we will undoubtedly be confronted with drestic shortages.

Aquacade Of 1942 To Be Presented Tonight At Swimming Pool

(By Dorothy K. Adams)

Plans for the Nevada City Aquacade for 1942 are now nearing completion under the direction of Elmo Patterson. Festivities will begin at 7:15 on Friday evening with the awarding of certificates and badges to those who have passed the rigid tests in their particular class.

The program will mark the end of Swim Weeks, sponsored by the Nevada City Red Cross.

The theme of the program will be the dream of two small girls, who after a day of swimming ,getting sunburned, and eating everything they could possibly hold such as hot dogs, pop, ice cream, candy, peanuts, pickles and gum, fall asleep upon reaching their home and dream all the things that happen during the program. The Sandman, who is really the annoncer, describes all the things that take place.

The program will begin with the playinw of the Star Spangled Banner by the Nevada County Band. Some of the high lights of the evening will be a wagon wheel formation performed by 30 to 50 girls; floating formations for small children who have not yet learned how to swim and a water waltz performed by the more advanced swimmers.

Swimming skills will be demonstrated to show American Red Cross training. There will be a complete demontration of life saving and artificial respiration methods used and taught by the Red Cross.

Mr. Patterson will give two demonstrations, one with a canoe and a special swimming exhibition.

There will be fancy diving and clown diving by local talent. Any swimmers, dancers or singers who would like to take part in the program are welcome to do so and they are aked to sign up at the booth at the pool.

Canoes for the demonstrations will be donated by Frank Thurston, manager of Lake Olympia, and the sound system will be donated by Art's Radio Hospital.

Seats will be arranged for on the terraces above the pool, and there will be absolutely no admission charge.

Come! Tell your friends and bring the kids. they'll love it. A wonderful acquacade with local talen in action so that's even better than Billy Rose can do.

DEER HUNTING IS SUSPENDED

Nevada City deer hunters mourned when the news was received that, as a war time defense measure, Lt G.en. J. L. DeWitt set in motion the legal machinery to suspend the hunting season in all of the state which had not been closed previously.

Some districts eventually may be exempted, Governor Olson said, in disclosing that General DeWitt had requested closing of the season in all counties north of Monterey pending later advices from him regarding special areas which now are being determined by the forestry service.

General DeWitt said termination of hunting will be a protection to forests and grazing land from fire.

Army Dimout Effects All Nevada County West Of Tahoe Forest Boundary

Nevada City and the rest of Nevada County west of the Tahoe National Forest boundaries is effected by the United States Army dim-out regulations, effective August 10th, ordering every electric sign and theatre marquee extinguished and prescribing some form of shielding tor virtually all other types of exterior lighting.

The regulations, announced by Lt. Gen. J. L. DeWitt, will continue as long as the war lasts.

Covering a strip of western Washington, Oregon and California at some points as much as 150 miles wide, they have the effect of extending and tremendously augmenting the dim-out order requested by the Navy last spring for certain ocean-front sections of the coast and administered by the office of civilian defense.

The proclamation created a "zone of restricted lighting", which General DeWitt said the present situation requires as a matter of military necessity.

"The armed forces of the enemy have made attacks upon vessels of the United States traveling along the Pacific coastal waters and upon land installations," the proclamation said.

"ItI is necessary to provide maximum protection for war utilities, war materials and war premises located within the states of Washington, Oregon, and California against enem attacks by sea and air."

The army order provides for three degrees of darkening. Completely blackened are illuminated signs and onramental lighting of every description which are visible out of doors, floodlighting which illuminates buildings or signs and interior signs and ornamental lighting immediately within unobscured window areas.

It is this clause which bans afterdark athletics and bill boards, display lighting, building outline lighting and the like. Exception is made in the single case of ordinary store show window lighting of normal intensity, unless such illumination is visible from the sea.

A second phase of the proclamation requires the shielding of certain types of lights in the restricted area so that they are not visible from above.

In this category are: illumination on all outdoor ground areas such as service station yards, parking areas, recreation areas and entrances, to buildings; all light sources for industrial and protective purposes and light from industrial processes; traffic signs and signals; street and highway lights; industrial fires, such as kilns, furnaces and refuse burners.

With regard to outdoor ground areas, the proclamation further specifies that, in addition to the top shielding no lighting shall exceed one foot candle at any point regardless of the directin of the rays.

The restricted lighting zone extends along the west coast from border to border but, of course, does not include any part of Canada or Mexico.

It spreads from the sea, to, roughly, the Cascades mountains in Washington and northern Oregon, cuts westward in Oregon along the southern boundary of Marion and Polk counties to the eastern boundary of Lincoln, then follows in nearly a straight line to the nothern boundary of Humboldt county in California.

From there it branches eastward again along the northern boundaries of Trinity and Shatsa counties, turns south and follows the foothills of the Sierra Nevadas and the line of the Tehachapi moutains to the base of southern California.

General DeWitt explained that his command felt it necessary to encompass so much inland territory in the restricted zone because, under proper conditions, the overhead glow from brightly lighted cities, particularly large ones, can be seen as far as 150 miles away being reflected in a huge inverted V from its point of origin.

"Dim-out practices now in effect under the orders of the office of civilian defense have accomplished a great deal in cutting down the light visible at sea." DeWitt said, "but it is necessary the pattern be better balanced and that it obscure target areas over a larger area.

RODENTS MENACE TO VACATIONISTS

Vacationiss are admonished by Dr. Bertram P. Brown, director, State Department of Public Health, to beware of wild rodents which transmit bubonic plague and rothe serious diseases.

Surveys conducted by the department indicate widespread epidemics of plague among wild animals throughout the state. The disease is spread to man by the bite of a blood sucking insect which has first fed upon an infected animal.

The flea is usually the villian, but plague has also been demonstrated in ticks and lice. Rodents which have been found to be infected include rats of all kinds, chipmunks, ground squirrels, field mice, rabbits, gophers, prairie dogs and the ground hogs.

"Since 1927, plague has been demonstrated in the wild rodents in 24 Caliornia counties. Constant work by the State Department of Public Health, the State Department of Agriculture and local commissioners have prevented all but afew scattered human cases," Dr. Brown pointed out.

"However, the threat is always present since the most intensive work has been unsuccessful in permanently eliminating plague from an area, once the wild rodents become infected. No human cases have occurred this year but two boys died of plague last year in one county where there was an epidemic among the wild rodents."

He advised campers and others living in rural areas to take the following precautions to protect themselves against plague and the other diseases carried by insects from rodents to man, which include tularemia, rock mountain spotted fever, and relapsing fever:

1 Do not handle or feed wild rodents and avoid contact with their nests or burrows.

2 Elevate tent platforms and cabin floors at least 18 inches from the ground and have them open at the sides so that no rodent can find a nest or hiding place. Where buildings are not so elevated, the space under them should be made rodent proof. Screen all windows and doors.

3 Keep all garbage and other refuse in tightly covered metal containers. The contents of such containers should be burned, deeply buried or hauled to a designtaed dumping ground.

4 Cover all water supply storage and distributing tanks in order to prevent the entrance of rodents.

5 Dogs and cats should not be permitted to run at large. They may bring back infected insects or dead rodents.

The State Department of Public Health has survey crews working from eight mobile laboratories in the field. When plague is found, local agricultural commissioners are notified at once so that measures may be taken to exterminate the rodents.

INCREASE IN MAN CAUSED FIRES MAY RESULT IN STRICT FOREST REGULATIONS

Assistant Supervisor Marc Edmonds today expressed great concern over the ever increasing number of man caused fires on the Tahoe National Forest. The Tahoe Forest to date has had 12 man caused fires, all of which could have been avoided had the persons responsible been fully aware of their responsibility as sportsmen and citizens in the prevention of fire. Edmunds further stated that even though these fires had been held to a minimum by efficient Tahoe fire crews, he felt that public opinion would demand that more strict forest closures be enacted instead of the present policy of few restrictions. Edmonds advised that the forest service policy has always been in favor of having the forests open for public use by sportsmen, recreationists and other citizens, but it is quite possible that this policy will be discarded in favor of more strict regulations governing forest use should fires of this type continue.

HAM AND EGGERS ON BALLOT

(By Clem Whitaker)

The Ham and Eggs pension act isn't on the ballot this year, but the issue is!

This paradoxial political situation arises from the fact that while the new Payroll Guarantee Amendment failed to qualify for the 1942 election. two of the chief backers of the act did make the grade—and are running for office on a straight Ham and Eggs ticket.

The gentlemen in question are Roy G. Owens, candidate for governor, and Lawrence W. Allen, candidate for attorney general, and their campaign literature leaves no doubt as to the issue on which they are seeking election.

First, they are pledged to the "adoption of the Payroll Guarantee Amendment, providing paychecks or pensions for all, by state constitutional amendment which the legislature cannot change."

Second, they are out to revenge Governor Olson's asserted "double-cross" of the Ham and Eggs movement, which they claim he supported when he needed votes, but denounced following his election.

The Owens-Allen campaign pamphlets. which are directed particularly to members of Organized Labor, carry this direct attack on the governor:

"More than one million friends of pensions in California helped to vote Olson into office because, on Aug. 11, 1938, he sent us this telegram: "I am proud to have been the first candidate for governor to make a public declaration on this pension measure. I want to see it adopted.

"Again on Aug. 15, 1938. Candidate Olson sent us another telegram saying: 'I wish to repeat my unequivocal position on the old age retirement plan. I am for its adoption."

"But Olson double-crossed us. No sooner was he elected with our votes. than he revealed his true character in a statewide broadcast saying: 'I am utterly convinced that the measure would prove to be a failure if adopted; I cannot support the measure, and it should be defeated."

Under the colorful sub-head "Olson Is a Dead Duck Now", the two Ham and Eggs candidates pledge themselves to aid labor in its fight against the Hot Cargo bill and then conclude:

"In turn, we ask you to vote for Roy G. Owens for governor and Lawrence W. Allen for attorney general. Remember—Olson is a goner; he's through in California. just as 'washed up' by our pension voters as were Merriam, McAdee and anti-labor Proposition No. 1 in 1938."

And that is what is known in political parlance as laying it on the line. The pension act may not be on the ballot, but the Ham and Eggs are not only being warmed over; they're literally sizzling!

Horse Trail Machine In Use Near Downieville

According to District Ranger Frank B. Delaney of Downieville, the only machine in California for building horse trails has been assigned to the Downieville district of the Tahoe national forest. It will be used to repair trails this summer. The tractor, which is the caterpillar type was built by the forest service in Portland, Oregon, as an experiment. It weighs 2,500 pounds and is eight feet long. The bulldozer blade makes a trail approximately 42 inches wide. The machine has four speed ahead and four in reverse.

At present it is working on the Gibraltar Mine Trail from the Lavezolla ranch about six miles north of Downieville on the Middle Fork of the Yuba River.

Ranger Delaney expects to do so much needed maintenance work with this machine this year. Orin Latten of Goodyears Bar is in charge of the trail crew.

THE BLOOD BANK

Maybe you're just an average chap,
Neither a wizard nor an ignorant sap.
You've surely wanted to do your part,
And have already shown your loyal heart.
You're buying bonds—that's understood.
You'd buy still more, if you only could.
What with Civil Defense—you're doing a lot,
And taxes have you on the spot.
But you'd probably like to do much more.
Towards winning this bitter and bloody war.
You'd probably give, you and your wife,
Whatever you could to save a life.
Well, you'll help the boys in battle's mud.
If you give a pint of your good red blood.
This week is called Blood Donor Week.
The hree blood banks together seek,
To gain blood for the needs at hand,
And for desperate needs that can't be planned.
Giving blood is painless, easy;
There's naught at all to make one queasy.
If you've already given—then,
Now's the time to give again.
The plasma's dried and sent away,
To save our lads in mortal fray.
'Tis only just a bit to do,
Yet your blood may see a soldier through.
Words cannot tell how great the need,
Of those who fighting, wounded bleed.
A blood donation's easy done,
Between ages sixty—twenty-one.
One cannot give—it's ruled so.
You'll know that your red blood will aid,
Some hero—and you've willing, paid,
In part, at least, the debt we owe,
To those who into battle go.
That soldier—struggling hard to live,
Will bless your soul for what you give.

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

The 152nd birthday of he United States Coast Guard is the signal for a renewed and spirited enlistment campaign this week throughout the country, the recruiting office at 110 Custom House announces.

This adventurous and hard-hitting service—both in peace and war since 1790—is urgently in need of men to carry out new vital assignments on land, sea and in the sky.

Physically qualified men will find this branch of the armed forces interesting and opportune. Advancement is rapid for those who prove their ability. Investigate today.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder if we, the American people
Have parked our emotions and if, day by day,
In a state of well balanced compalcent confusion
We'll toddle along until after the fray.
I wonder why certain columnists and news analysts persist in rationing our emotions. We are allowed but two at the present time, complacency and confusion. These gentlemen of the press and radio seem to speak with authority and that authority is usually their own.

Of course we were complacent; voices filled our ears—declaring in no uncertain tones that our two ocean barriers protected us from invasion, that nothing could happen here and if one of us uttered faint words of doubt he was howled down, called a war monger and looked upon as a person of very limited intelligence.

Then came Pearl Harbor. Instantly and without warning, all the fairy tales of national security were silenced. The great Pacific ocean had been defied. American territory had suffered attack by the breed of the scum; of course we were confused, but our emotions quickly changed to those of anger and we determined to defend our country and our way of life from the depredations of an unworthy foe.

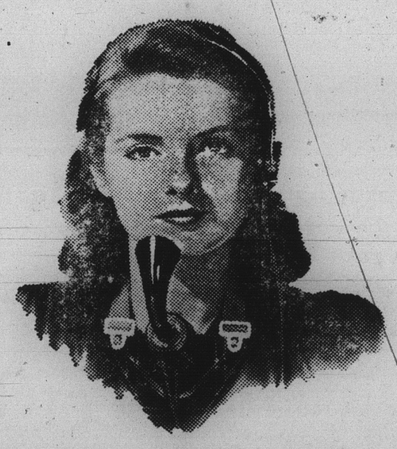
We had always placed our confidence in our navy, said to be larger and better than all other navies of the world, in the impregnability of our fortresses and those of our allies, in our own natural resources which we believed o be inexhaustible. We were confident of swift retribution for the foe, we waited in that confidence only to see the Japs take what they wanted and while German under sea craft sank our ships with impunity.

During the months which have elapsed since the tragedy of Pearl Harbor, we have had no grounds for complacency. That emotion is now as hard to find as a rational explanation of the rubber situation. Confusion in most minds has given way to disappointments; our territory has been invaded, the flag of Japan flies over American soil; Alaska is in danger and if the veil of "one way fog" is not soon lifted, even the mainland may be in the direct way of the storm.

Yes, we are disappointed, at times a bit dismayed, but we are not discouraged. We know there will be satisfactory action by our armed forces, we know that our allies will receive from America the aid they so sorely need. Therefore, I contend that the emotions of complacency and confusion are in abeyance. They have been superceded by other motions which in many cases lie too deep for words.

I wonder though if some of the deep, dark military secrets which are already known to our enemies, would if revealed by those who keep them hidden from the American public, tend to raise our morale and furnish us with added incentives for the work we are called upon to do. I, myself, would like to know when one of our ships, which were armed for the purpose, sends a German sub to the bottom. Of course those in authorityy know best, but I believe the psychology provided by a bit more of information, would do the ordinary citizen much good.

If the columnists and news analysts would dig a bit deeper into the hearts and minds of their American audiences, I'm sure they would find a complexity of emotions at this particular time. If complacency and confusion are among them, they are fast becoming coincidental.—A. MERRIAM CONNER.



You Can Help Make Telephone Service Meet Demands of War

By keeping conversations BRIEF.
By being sure of your number before you call.
By using Long Distance for essential messages ONLY.
By using station-to-station service wherever possible for toll calls.

Your cooperation will aid in this national emergency because the demands of war have loaded our long distance lines and many of our local facilities to capacity and beyond.

Materials required to increase circuits and switchboards cannot be obtained—they must go into the making of weapons and munitions. It is not now possible to build more plant.

Therefore, we all are confronted with the necessity of getting the most out of what we have. In following the above suggestions, you can save yourself time and expense and you will help us keep the way clear for War Messages That Must Go Through.

We appreciate your splendid response in helping to meet these problems which involve the safety and security of us all.
